

The Antiquities Act gives authority to the President to designate monuments on federal lands that contain objects of historic and scientific interest.

It directs the President to reserve the smallest area compatible with the proper care and management of the objects to be protected.

that public comment and review period to solicit robust feedback from local communities and state and tribal governments on recommendations for new monuments that will only cover the smallest area compatible to protect objects of historic or scientific interest.

- In a separate or the same Proclamation, ask for recommendations from the Secretary on modifications to or revisions of existing National Monuments.
